

Perfect location

In the heart of Europe

A look at the map shows: There is hardly a more central location than Kaiserslautern! You can reach most European capitals in less than two hours by air, and the efficient transportation infrastructure offers boundless options.

A quick meeting in Brussels (370 km), a trade fair in Luxemburg (150 km), and for the weekend off to Paris (450 km) – for such a busy schedule the Kaiserslautern business region is the ideal base.

And within Germany we are also well connected with such large economic centres as Rhein-Main, Rhein-Neckar, and Rhein-Ruhr.

So, everything speaks for this location – in the words of Kurt Beck, the Minister President of the Rhineland-Palatinate: “Within the next ten to fifteen years Kaiserslautern will be among the leading technology regions in Germany and beyond.”

Kaiserslautern in Europe

All roads lead to Kaiserslautern

Road, rail, air? Your choice!

By car the Kaiserslautern business region is accessible from every direction: The A6 links us with the Rhein-Neckar metropolitan region as well as with the Saarland and France; the A63 leads to the Rhein-Main region; the A62 is your connection, via Trier and Luxemburg, to the North Sea ports. Several regional and international airports are close by, among them one of the largest worldwide, Frankfurt am Main – which you can also comfortably reach by ICE train.

How practical: The Rhine as transport route for cargo

When it comes to transporting heavy loads, the rail – thanks to the piece goods station and container terminal in Kaiserslautern-Einsiedlerhof – is a serious alternative. But not the only one! There also is Europe's busiest waterway: the Rhine. The Ludwigshafen Rhine port handles more than 7 million tons of goods per year, the Mainz customs and inland harbour is considered the key logistics centre, and the state port in Wörth am Rhein counts among the major inland container ports in Germany.
